League For Peace

Seminar Held At Capito To Study Foreign Policy

The Women's International League for Peace and Freedom just completed its eighth annual legislative seminar at Washington, D.C.

Legislative chairmen, branch leaders and national board members focused attention on the Central Intelligence Agency and Foreign Policy.

At an early session, Dr. Darrell Randall, American University, said Congress would move further if the people gave them more support. Later, Warren Mullin, Foreign Policy Analyst, and Director of Business Intelligence told delegates the CIA is making foreign policy. Intelligence should be the function of the CIA but because the powerful agency does not have to answer to anyone it has moved into the State Department's realm and it is not effective as a spy organization. The President gets a daily report but neither he nor the National Security Council can probe.

The two Dulles brothers moved the CIA into the policy making area. One way to curb the growing power would be to have a strong-minded Secretary of State. Mullin said he did not see this man on the national scene. He suggested League members have a project to support a resolution to make the CIA responsible to Congress.

During the Seminary delegates visited the Department of State to discuss Foreign Policy As Viewed By the Administration, with Paul M. Kattenburg, Deputy Director for Regional Affairs, Bureau of Far Eastern Affairs. There were visits to Congressmen, to Senate and House Galleries, to Embassies and to Hearings.

Mrs. Gloria Richardson, chairman, Cambridge Non-violent Action Committee spoke on "The Impact of Non-Violence on the Individual and the Community", and Clarence Mitchell, director of Washington of NAACP spoke on Civil Rights Legislation. Dr. Emile Benoit, Prof. School of Business, Columbia University, spoke on Defense Cuts and Unemployment.

WILPF is the oldest women's peace organization. Jane Addams and Emily Greene Balch, founders and first two presidents, were the only women to receive the Nobel Peace Prize.

Mrs. J. Reed Supplee of Pickertown Road, Warrington, is legislative chairman of the Doylestown-New Hope Branch of the League.
